She's spoiled, but sweet! Venus, the goddess of love and high art, is responsible for the way we relate to one another, and when she changes signs it pays us to adopt new attitudes to suit her mood. While she is in Libra, from September 14th until October 9th, expect people to be sweet - at least on the outside. What's going on inside their heads, though, could make you wonder whether you can ever be nice enough to meet up with their expectations. Venus in Libra is extremely friendly and romantic, but also very demanding. If you're in a relationship, now's the time to send flowers or cook a favorite meal. If you're not attached but would like to be, you may take a much more romantic approach to your quest, and your intended may want to have much more attention than you have the time to give. Still, try hard to be nice. Even when you're not getting the sweet treatment back from other people, extending friendliness and a positive attitude can reassure you that you're doing your part to make Venus and Libra happy!

Venus in libra is also very artistic, but not in the wildly creative sense. The refined beauty of an Ionic column or a patiently painted Monet will trump avant garde architecture or the hilarious humor of a Warhol. When Venus in Libra is dissatisfied, you may not find out about it directly. Far from being moody or emotional, Venus in Libra inspires people to be passive-aggressive. Be watchful of someone you might have inadvertently insulted or rejected, because they'll be out to "hit" you back when you least suspect it. When you ask what's wrong, the answer will invariably be, "nothing!"

While she's in Libra during the fall of 2011, Venus will interact with the Aries Axis. This may not be such a bad thing, as she'll have a softening effect on the hearts involved in day to day dramas as well as world events. There will be a little bit of peace and good will to hope for, and that's reassuring. She'll get shaken up by planet Uranus on the 17th, then become overpowered by Pluto on the 18th. Both of these days will bring noticeable events in relationships. There could be sudden attractions as well as love and friendship triangles which, if left unresolved, could result in everyone being hurt. On the 29th, Venues will bump into Saturn. This could bring a cooling off in relations, and if you want to end a relationship this will be a good date to plan the ultimate conversation. Or, you might just not feel like being nice that day. Try to structure your gestures of good faith in a way that you can build trust, despite any odds against you. On October 7th, Venus will make a harmonious trine with Neptune, creating the perfect atmosphere for falling in love, whether for keeps or for the third time in that week. This sets the stage for her entrance to sexy Scorpio, which is sure to be just as lovey-dovey, but a whole lot sexier!
